

Abstract

A device for removing blood clots and methods of making and using the same.

The clot pulling device may include a shaft and one or more strut members that each may include a loop region. The proximal ends of the strut members may be attached to the 5 shaft and the distal ends of the strut members may be coupled to the shaft.